Pittsbune, 18th April, 1862

We have tried Coale's Patent Japan Drier, and find it an excellent article We tried it with lampblack ground in raw oil. We found with lampblack ground in raw oil. We lound that for these two colors we had to use a larger proportion of drier than that recommended by Mr. Coale, but for others colors we found the quantity (one eight) quite enough to dry them thoroughly. Practical painters know that a Japan that will dry lampblack and Vandyke brown will dry any other color that it is put into. We therefore have no hesitation in recommending it to the trade and to the public generally.
